Dear Federal Trade Commission Member:

“Business Opportunity Rule, Matter No. R511993”

I am writing to ask that you reconsider some of the requirements you are proposing to regulate the direct sales industry. I am a Xango Consultant and am very proud to have started in this business ten months ago. I began my Xango business because I am a recent widow with a seven year old son to raise. The income I make will allow me to pay all of my bills as well save some for my son's future.

Some of the proposals you are suggesting would make my business much more difficult and impact my income. Specifically, in terms of the references requirement, I would never feel comfortable providing the personal contact information of other people in Xango, nor would I want my own personal information given out freely.

I love sharing the benefits I have received from Xango and hope other people can benefit as I have. I also feel good about sharing the business opportunity with others. The regulations you are proposing would hinder me from doing so-and would hinder others in starting their business in the timeframe they choose.

Please know that I'm thankful that we have the FTC working to protect average consumers like me, but in this case, you will be working against me, impacting my income, my future and my family's future.

Please reconsider the regulations you are proposing and thank you for your time.

Respectfully yours,
